Equality and Inclusion

You have the right to

What: As described in Government/Management, student bodies in Finland are self-governing and represent students' interests and rights within the university of applied sciences and the larger community.

Quote from the Universities of Applied Sciences Act:

“The student body liaises with and on behalf of its members and promotes their societal, social and intellectual aspirations and those relating to studies and the status of students in society. The student body also contributes to preparing students for active, informed and critical citizenship.

The student body of a university of applied sciences is self-governing. The student body's decision-making power is vested in its executive board and the student parliament.”
